Homeland Security is on the hot seat. Back in October 2010, DHS Secretary Janet Napolitano named the devout Muslim Mohamed Elibiary to the Homeland Security Advisory Council. The Texas Department of Public Safety now says that Elibiary may have been allowed to gain access to a highly sensitive database of intelligence reports, and then allegedly shopped some of the material he found in that database to a media outlet for a story about "Islamophobia" in the Public Safety Department.

Who else is the devout Elibiary shopping sensitive intel to? Mohamed Elibiary was one of the speakers at a December 2004 conference in Dallas entitled "A Tribute to the Great Islamic Visionary," that is, the Ayatollah Khomeini, leader of Iran and the violent Muslim global revolution to install a universal Islamic government. When Rod Dreher of the Dallas Morning News challenged him about his appearance at this conference, Elibiary threatened Dreher, writing: "Expect someone to put a banana in your exhaust pipe." I warned about Elibiary's appointment back in 2010.

It is bad enough that Napolitano appointed Elibiary to the Homeland Security Advisory Council in the first place, but it gets even worse. When questioned last week by Rep. Louie Gohmert, R-Texas, at the U.S. Immigration and Enforcement hearings, Big Sis, Janet Napolitano (with the most disturbing hairdo and hair color that I have ever seen), admitted that she has been giving secret clearance to Muslim Brotherhood-tied operatives here in the U.S.

Join Pamela Geller in her fight to battle jihadist initiatives in our local communities -- read "Stop The Islamization Of America: A Practical Guide to the Resistance"

It was jaw-dropping testimony. Looking like a character in a John Waters film, Janet Napolitano is either clueless or complicit, or outright lying to cover for her Muslim Brotherhood appointments. Napolitano denies being aware of a Muslim Brotherhood-tied operative whom she swore in.

Rep. Gohmert does a spectacular job pressing Napolitano on her knowledge of the story of Mohamed Elibiary. Gohmert asked if she was aware of Elibiary's activities, and she said she was not. The congressman then further pressed Napolitano on her knowledge of Elibiary's support for the Ayatollah Khomeini. Again she feigned concern and professed ignorance.

This is the head of the Department of Homeland Security claiming ignorance about an important manifestation of the most dangerous threat to the homeland, the global jihad and Islamic imperialism and expansion. All of her answers indicate that she is being led by her not inconsequential nose by those who seek in their own words to work toward "eliminating and destroying Western civilization from within and sabotaging its miserable house."

Gohmert asked her if Elibiary's case concerned her at all and ... she didn't answer.

In his final question, Rep. Gohmert asked Napolitano if they needed to appoint somebody to investigate Elibiary's spying and shopping the intel around (who knows who else Mohamed Elibiary shared this top secret info with?), and she said she would "look into it."

Trust me, Rep. Gohmert, she will never investigate; please appoint an investigator. Big Sis is part of the problem.

(Column continues below)

Napolitano has stacked her "Countering Violent Extremism" program with Muslim Brotherhood-tied operatives. They have so twisted and won the narrative that the strategy of Islamic terrorism has been reduced to the status of local crime (violent, yes, but local crime, nonetheless). Read this claptrap. The president of the Muslim Brotherhood-tied Islamic Society of North America (ISNA), Mohamed Magid, is a member of her "Countering Violent Extremism" working group and is given secret clearance. ISNA has admitted its Hamas ties. (And remember, Hamas is the Muslim Brotherhood in Gaza.)

Elibiary is not alone; nor is Magid. Other stealth jihad appointments at Obama's Department of Homeland Security include Kareem Shora, leader of an Arab group that hailed jihadists, and Arif Alikhan. These appointments were obvious attempts to show the Muslims of the U.S. that anti-terror efforts were not anti-Islam or anti-Muslim. Shora and Alikhan would stand as moderate Muslims within the DHS, living illustrations of the iron dogma that all Muslims aside from a tiny minority were loyal Americans who abhorred Osama bin Laden and everything he stood for.

But when he made the appointment, Obama seemed not to care that as deputy mayor of Los Angeles, Alikhan (who has referred to the jihad terrorist group Hezbollah as a "liberation movement") had blocked an effort by the Los Angeles Police Department to gather information about the ethnic makeup of area mosques. This was not an effort to conduct surveillance of Los Angeles mosques, or wiretap them. L.A.'s deputy police chief, Michael P. Downing, said: "We want to know where the Pakistanis, Iranians and Chechens are so we can reach out to those communities." But Muslim leaders cried racism, discrimination and "Islamophobia" until the LAPD dropped the plan. And Arif Alikhan spearheaded the drive against this initiative.

It's to laugh, it's to cry. I-N-F-I-L-T-R-A-T-I-O-N.

The government increasingly aligns with our mortal enemies. Steel yourselves.
