I guess you can call Chis Christie the antithesis of Herman Cain.

The New Jersey governor appointed a Muslim judge this year, something Cain said he would never do (and then backtracked), and during a press conference yesterday answered questions about it. Or more appropriately put, he delivered a trademarked, passionate tongue-lashing of those who questioned his decision.

Mediaite has some of Christie's most colorful quotes (which I've bolded):

"Ignorance is behind the criticism of Sohail Mohammed," he told a reporter asking about the complaints that he may be inadequate to be a judge because he defended Muslim Americans who were wrongly arrested post-9/11. "He is an extraordinary American who is an outstanding lawyer and played an integral role in the post-September 11th period in building bridges between the Muslim American community in this state and law enforcement," Gov. Christie argued, adding that he was "disgusted, candidly, by some of the questions he was asked... at the Senate judiciary committee."

But it was a follow-up question on the fear of Sharia Law that set the governor off. "Sharia Law has nothing to do with this at all, it's crazy!" he cried. "The guy is an American citizen!" He concluded that the "Sharia Law business is just crap... and I'm tired of dealing with the crazies," adding with disgust and frustration that "it's just unnecessary to be accusing this guy of things just because of his religious background."

Watch it unfold below:

Mohammed is an Indian-American who was appointed as a Superior Court judge back in January. He has just now been sworn in.

I wonder what Herman Cain will say.
