

Hunt for 'Black Widow' suicide bomber on the loose in Sochi: Wife of dead militant feared to be targeting Winter Olympics - along with THREE other female terrorists

- Posters of Ruzan Ibragimova, 23, the wife of a Islamist militant killed by Russian security forces last year, have been put up in the Olympic city
- She has a scar on her cheek, a limp, and one arm won't bend at the elbow
- Authorities believe she has left her home in Dagestan for Winter Olympics
- Video featuring two men has been posted on militant Chechen website
- Men may be linked to December 2013 Volgograd bombings
- They warn of 'surprise package' that will be 'for all the Muslim blood that is shed every day around the world'
- Russian president Vladimir Putin said earlier this week Russia will do 'whatever it takes' for security at the Games
- US and Russian officials may be looking for as many as four 'black widows' who could be trying to launch an attack on Sochi

By Daily Mail Reporter and Chris Pleasance

PUBLISHED: 23:19 EST, 19 January 2014 | UPDATED: 04:33 EST, 21 January 2014

A manhunt has been launched for four 'black widows' planning to suicide bomb the Winter Olympics.

Officers are scouring Sochi, where the games begin next month, with wanted posters featuring Ruzan Ibragimova, 22, whose husband was killed by Russian security forces last year.

The suspect, from Dagestan - a city notorious for its use of 'black widows' - is believed to be plotting an attack with three other women.

Ибрагимова Рузана Ахмадиевна, 06.06.1991 г.р., урож. Моздокского района РСО-Алания, паспорт: 90 11 028812 выд. ОУФМС России по Республике Северная Осетия - Алания

Wanted: Ruzan Ibragimov, whose husband was an Islamist militant killed by Russian security forces last year

Changeable: Islamists in Caucasus are notorious for their use of 'black widows' as they can use make-up to change their appearance and usually go unsuspected. Ibramigova, pictured, is described as having a limp and a scar

She is described as having a limp, a scar on her cheek, and that her left arm does not bend at the elbow.

The posters say that Russian authorities believe she left Dagestan, a Russian republic in the Caucasus, earlier this month, and may be headed for the Olympic city.

The hunt follows the release of a video showing two young men who are believed to have been bombers in the December 2013 Volgograd attacks.

Posted by group Ansar al Sunah on a militant Chechen site, the two men warned that as long as President Vladimir Putin occupies the North Caucasus region near Sochi, Russians and Olympic visitors alike will not be safe, ABC News reported.

'We'll have a surprise package for you,' one of the men said in the video, according to the ABC report. 'And those tourists that will come to you, for them, too, we have a surprise. If it happens [the Olympics], we'll have a surprise for you.'

The two men in the video, warn their 'surprise package' will be 'for all the Muslim blood that is shed every day around the world, be it in Afghanistan, Somalia, Syria, all around the world'

U.S. officials are investigating whether the two men in the video, seen here, are tied to the December Volgograd bombings

Islamist group threatens Sochi Games in video

'This is for all the Muslim blood that is shed every day around the world, be it in Afghanistan, Somalia, Syria, all around the world. This will be our revenge.'

U.S. authorities are examining the video -- but an official told USA Today that 'there was no definitive evidence' to indicate whether the men shown in the video were actually tied to the Volgograd bombings, which killed more than 30 people.

Russian and US authorities are also thought to be looking for as many as four 'black widows' who they believe may attempt to carry out terrorist attacks close to the Winter Olympics.

Militant groups in the Caucasus have been known to use 'black widows' because they can easily alter their appearance with makeup and different clothes, and do not fit the typical profile of an Islamist bomber.

Investigators work at the site of a blast on a trolleybus in Volgograd on December 30, 2013 in this photograph

Russian president Vladimir Putin, seen in this file photo, told ABC that Russia will do 'whatever it takes' to make the Sochi Games secure. An expected 80,000 troops are to be on guard

Officials are also allegedly concerned that Russians are not fully cooperating with American security, according to ABC.

Other extremists linked to Muslim separatist leader Doku Umarov have threatened to upset the Games, according to The New York Times.

U.S. lawmakers are worried about security at the upcoming Winter Olympics. Rep. Mike Rogers (R-Mich) told CNN's Candy Crowley he was 'very concerned.'

The U.S., meanwhile, reportedly has only sent 40 FBI personnel to Russia -- compared to more than 100 staff sent to previous Games held in China, Italy and Greece, according to The Wall Street Journal.

Security guards patrol at the Olympic Park in Adler near Sochi January 16, 2014 in this photo

...while police officers patrol on a train at the train station in the Adler district of Sochi on January 17, 2014